EDITION

Welcome to the 2021 Edition

of the Corvallis Garden Resource Guide

This guide was produced by members of the Food Action Team of the Corvallis Sustainability Coalition. Donations to support this project may be sent to Corvallis Sustainability Coalition, PO Box 2310, Corvallis, OR 97339. Make checks payable to Corvallis Sustainability Coalition, with “Garden Resource Guide” noted on the check.

Thanks to all the individuals and groups that provided suggestions and feedback, and to all who have contributed to this project since its inception in 2011. Special thanks go to the many Food Action Team members who helped produce this edition and to Rebecca “Sunny” Winters for the cover design.

We’ve tried to be as complete and accurate as possible. We apologize for any omissions or errors. Send corrections and additions to corvallisfoodaction@gmail.com for inclusion in later editions. You may also use this address to request copies of the guide for your event, organization, or business.

How to Use This Guide

In this guide, we focus on food growing, including resources for growing vegetables, fruit, herbs, mushrooms, poultry, and bees. We emphasize organizations and businesses that are local, organic, unique, and perhaps not as well known as they should be. The guide is intended for new and experienced gardeners alike; every year the editors are reminded of a book we still ought to buy, a new resource for garden help, or a place yet to visit.

If you are new to gardening or want to learn new techniques in the off-season, start by Gathering Knowledge on Page 3. “Getting Started” provides a starting point for folks about to turn their first beds. In addition to learning centers offering classes and workshops, we list a selection of locally available gardening books with an emphasis on regional focus and local authors.

When it’s time to work the soil and plant the seeds, turn to Getting What You Need on Page 7. The local farm and garden centers are one-stop shops, and multiple local and regional companies offer supplies, soil, amendments, seeds, and plants.

Gardening need not be a solo activity or limited by a lack of space. Growing Together on Page 15 includes listings for neighborhood gardening groups and community gardens.

When you are swimming in rhubarb or tomatoes, turn to Harvesting the Bounty on Page 17. The listed resources will help you preserve your surplus, donate to those in need, or make a little money at the farmers’ market.

Chickens and ducks don’t exactly grow from the soil, but they go hand-in-hand with backyard gardening. If you have a flock or are looking to buy chicks, turn to the Backyard Poultry section on Page 19.

Beekeeping (Page 21) continues to grow in popularity among gardeners wishing to harvest honey and ensure good pollination. For those willing to brave the stings, Corvallis has a local equipment supplier, a bee club, and plenty of learning opportunities.

The Food Action Team

The Food Action Team of the Corvallis Sustainability Coalition works toward a system in which we are fed primarily by food which is locally produced, using practices that renew and enrich the land and community. We are a growing, lively group of volunteers. Our projects include:

-  Edible Garden Tours
-  Corvallis Garden Resource Guide
-  Growing Ancestral Roots
-  Neighborhood Planters Kiosks (NPK)
-  It's On Us Corvallis
-  Local Eats Week

We'd love to have you take part in our work. To find out more about our activities, go to sustainablecorvallis.org/action-teams/food/
